[soft ticking clock in background]

In labs, a chimpanzee's time passes slowly. Staring at blank walls, the floor, the ceiling, or at the bars of his cage. Waiting. That is, until the chimpanzee is chosen for testing.

[Pause]

Day after day, month after month, year after year after year.

[Pause and background silence]

Project R&R thinks that chimpanzees have spent enough time in labs. You can help them by visiting www.releasechimps.org.
